In Church on Sunday, Work on Monday Laura Nash (of Harvard Business School) and Scotty McLennan (the dean of religious life at Stanford University) have joined forces to consider the church's need to be more in touch with business and professional people. They make concrete recommendations to show church leaders and lay business people how to work in partnership to bridge the gap between pew and pulpit.

They understand that certain goods and services are required seven days a week and for this reason, some Christians have no other choice but to work on Sunday or be terminated. The last thing Christians should do is to judge those who work on Sundays and then go out and expect to have goods and services provided for them on that same day.

Working on Sunday is never called a sin in the Bible. This misconception has arisen based on a modern misunderstanding of the Old Testament's commands to rest on the Sabbath. In the Ten Commandments and elsewhere in the Law of Moses, the Israelites were commanded to do no work on the seventh day ( Exodus 20:8-11 ).

What does the Bible say about working on Sunday? Is it a sin?

Answer: Working on Sunday is definitely not a sin. Working on Sunday is not prohibited in the Bible. The idea that Christians should not be working on Sunday comes from a misunderstanding of Old Testament Sabbath-keeping for the Israelites and its relation to Sunday worship for Christians. According to Exodus 20:8-11, the Sabbath is the seventh day of the week on which the Israelites were to rest in remembrance that God created the universe in six days and then "rested" on the seventh day.

Rest from work is necessary. We know that even God himself rests: "he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had done" (Gen. 2:2). In recognition of this, the Church obligates us to rest on the Lord's day. The Code of Canon Law states, "On Sundays and other holy days of obligation, the faithful are obliged to participate in the Mass. Moreover, they are to abstain from those works and affairs which hinder the worship to be rendered to God, the joy proper to the Lord's ...
