Carlucci describes Gramsci, using his own words (from Prison Notebooks) about Marx: a personality 'in whom theoretical and practical activity are indissolubly intertwined' (21), he also stresses the philosopher's approach to translation (in the sense of 'cultural translation'), and his conscious choice of words (such as Sardinian comune). In the final remarks, Carlucci points to the perspective in which Gramsci viewed the relations between local and national languages, the ...

Gramsci stated that, in the West, bourgeois cultural values were tied to religion, and therefore much of his polemic against hegemonic culture is aimed at religious norms and values. He was impressed by the power Roman Catholicism had over men's minds and the care the Church had taken to prevent an excessive gap developing between the religion of the learned and that of the less educated.
