It is a form of denial that we live in an age of catastrophe now — and that denial is overpowering us, leaving us powerless and paralyzed. That brings me to my third feature of catastrophe. Catastrophes overwhelm us cognitively and emotionally — destabilizing us emotionally leaves us paralyzed cognitively.

A. About the end of the 8th and the beginning of the 7th century B.C. There is a unanimous tradition in the history of the world transcending all cultural boundaries, but largely unexamined to this day out of overspecialization, faulty education and mental inertia, alone or together. It is the tradition of the age of cosmic catastrophes.
