The Economic Value of Landscapes | Taylor & Francis Group

Merely saying that landscapes have value or are important is not sufficient - not when resources are scarce and have alternative uses. Measuring and quantifying the economic value of changes in landscapes would help ensure that landscape management decisions are both (economically) rational and sound.

The economic value of landscapes - IDEAS/RePEc

From an economic point of view, landscape can be conceptualized as an externality (positive or negative) and landscape values clearly need to be taken into consideration in decision-making process. Among the different methods that can be used for estimating the economic value of landscape, a very important role is played by Conjoint Analysis (CA). CA is a stated preference technique that is it asks respondents to state their preferences and opinions towards hypothetical scenarios.
