The European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) is a foreign relations instrument of the European Union (EU) which seeks to tie those countries to the east and south of the European territory of the EU to the Union. These countries, primarily developing countries, include some who seek to one day become either a member state of the European Union, or more closely integrated with the European Union.

European Neighbourhood Policy — Wikipedia

The European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) was developed to promote prosperity, stability and security within the EU's neighbours and to avoid new dividing lines between the enlarged EU and its neighbours. Home Affairs issues remain a priority.

European Neighbourhood Policy — European Commission

The European Union's European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) aims at bringing the EU and its neighbours closer, to their mutual benefit and interest. It was launched in 2004 to help the EU support and foster stability, security and prosperity in its closest neighbourhood. In 2015, the EU launched a public consultation and review of the policy, with a Joint Communication adopted in November 2015 to adjust it to the challenges and crises that have hit the neighbourhood regions since 2008.

About The European Neighbourhood Policy and the Democratic Values of the EU. This book offers a legal analysis of the European Neighbourhood Policy (the ENP) as it applies to developing relations with the EU's neighbours. It explores the legal aspects of this policy, including ENP competence matters, institutional arrangements and substantive policy issues, using international relations theory as the starting point in defining the EU's role as a political actor.

The Routledge Handbook on the European Neighbourhood Policy

About this book. This book analyses the revised European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) which entered into force in May 2011, thereby replacing its predecessor of 2003/2004. The edited volume provides a structured and comprehensive overview of the most recent developments in EU foreign policy (EUFPP) towards the EU's southern and eastern neighbourhood through the prism of continuity and change.

The European Neighbourhood Policy is managed jointly by the European External Action Service (EEAS) and the European Commission's Directorate-General for Neighbourhood and Enlargement Negotiations (NEAR). The EU Delegations (i.e., the EU's equivalent of embassies) to the Neighbourhood Countries play a key role in the ENP as well.

The European Neighbourhood Policy — OPEN Media Hub

The European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) was designed, in the early 2000s, to provide a consistent institutional framework with instruments for the EU to negotiate its relationship with partner countries in the eastern neighbourhood (B elarus1, Ukraine and Moldova, and then Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaijan after 2005) and in the southern neighbourhood (A lgeria, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, Lebanon, Libya, Morocco, the Palestinian Authority, Syria and Tunisia).

The European Neighbourhood Policy

Launched by the European Union (EU) in 2004, the European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) has provoked a vast array of academic enquiry and commentary. Amongst the various contributors to this literature, there is widespread acknowledgement that the ENP has at best been only partially effective (Freyburg et al., 2009; Belchev and Nicolaidis, 2010).

The Effectiveness of the European Neighbourhood Policy

Analysing the EU's relationship with Ukraine and Belarus through the European Neighbourhood Policy, the article argues the ENP's effectiveness and nature is dependent upon two factors: first, where the partner countries are located (and locate themselves) along a continuum of positive–negative otherness with respect to the EU and; second, their ability to utilise particular strategies of marginality to pursue their goals.

he European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) is a key priority within the European Union's foreign policy. Many events in the past few years have shown that the interests of European citizens are directly affected by the stability, security and prosperity of the European Union's neighbouring regions.
