The Green Mountain Boys: A Historical Tale of the Early ...

Even though Adams owned land in the New Hampshire Grants, the Green Mountain Boys put him on trial at the Catamount Tavern. They decided he was guilty. To punish him, they tied a chair to the tavern's sign and made him sit in the chair for hours. The tavern was a popular place in Bennington. The supporters of the Grants probably yelled at Dr. Adams and kept him from helping the Yorkers. Not all of the settlers supported the Green Mountain Boys.

The History of the Green Mountain Boys - Patriot Wood

A nice little story about a boy who lived during the Green Mountain Boys area/time and most likely contributed to the war somehow. The author used some liberties in how he interacted with the actual events, but it was believable and informative. It was a fast read-aloud, but an older elementary child could read this on their own.
